With immense pride and gratitude, I present to you the Annual Report for the academic year 2024-25, a year that has been marked by growth, innovation, and excellence at Mar Gregorios College of Arts & Science. As we reflect on our journey, we celebrate not just our achievements, but also the spirit of resilience, dedication, and transformation that defines our institution.

One of our most remarkable milestones this year was receiving the prestigious 'Promising & Trusted Arts & Science Degree College of the Year 2024' at the India Elite Education & Institutional Excellence Awards & Conference 2024. This recognition is not just a testament to our academic strength, but also to the values of integrity, excellence, and social responsibility that we uphold.

Education today is not confined to textbooks and classrooms—it is about adaptability, innovation, and lifelong learning. Keeping this in mind, we introduced skill-based certificate courses in areas such as Full Stack Development, Digital Marketing, Business Analytics, Emotional Intelligence, and Advanced Accounting to ensure our students are industry-ready and future-proof.

The heart of our institution lies in its people—our dedicated faculty, our talented students, and our visionary leadership. Our faculty continue to be the torchbearers of knowledge and mentorship, guiding students not just in academics but also in shaping their character and aspirations. Our students have made us proud, excelling in academics, research, cultural events, and sports, proving that learning is about both intellect and passion.

HUMANITY

People drew lines between them
But the air that whirls
The water that flows
The trees that rustles
Knew something

These barriers dissolve
Like mist in the morning light
And are fragile as glass

Inspite of diversities
We stand as one
United inspirit, under the same sun.

In the darkest moments of our life,
We find our path,
With compassion as our guide, we lead the way.
The love we share makes humanity truly care.

A DOT WITHIN A DOT

A man once came with boastful cheer
To Socrates, wise and clear
I built a house, so vast, so grand
The finest home in all the land

The people smiled, then brought a chart
A world map vast , a work of art
"Tell us sir where do you stay?"
Point your city, show us the way

A tiny dot , his city 's mark
Lost within the map so stark
And now your home? They asked once more
A Dot within that got so small

Socrates spoke, serene profound
Is that what makes you stand so proud?
The universe, so great and wide
Yet God does not boast with pride!

So let not wealth or walls define
The measure of this life divine
For fleeting are the things we claim
But wisdom shines beyond a name.

But I shall boast, with heart sincere
Of one great truth, that's ever clear
I serve my lord , my guiding king
And that alone is pride to bring…

BLOCKCHAIN TECHNOLOGY

Blockchain is the backbone Technology of Digital CryptocurrencyBitcoin. The blockchain is a distributed database of records of all transactions or digital event that have been executed and shared among participating parties. Each transaction verified by the majority of participants of the system. It contains every single record of each transaction.

Bitcoin is the most popular cryptocurrency an example of the blockchain. Blockchain Technology first came to light when a person or Group of individuals name 'Satoshi Nakamoto' published a white paper on "Bitcoin: A peer to peer electronic cash system" in 2008.

Blockchain Technology Records Transaction in Digital Ledger which is distributed over the Network thus making it incorruptible. Anything of value like Land Assets, Cars, etc. can be recorded on Blockchain as a Transaction. Blockchain is a system of recording information in a way that makes it difficult or impossible to change, hack, or cheat the system.

A blockchain is essentially a digital ledger of transactions that is duplicated and distributed across the entire network of computer systems on the blockchain. Each block in the chain contains a number of transactions, and every time a new transaction occurs on the blockchain, a record of that transaction is added to every participant's ledger. The decentralised database managed by multiple participants is known as Distributed Ledger Technology (DLT). Blockchain is a type of DLT in which transactions are recorded with an immutable cryptographic signature called a hash.

A blockchain is a constantly growing ledger which keeps a permanent record of all the transactions that have taken place in a secure, chronological, and immutable way.

A blockchain is a chain of blocks which contain information. Each block records all of the recent transactions, and once completed goes into the blockchain as a permanent database. Each time a block gets completed; a new block is generated.

Key Features of Blockchain Technology -Decentralized model, Transparency, Traceability Trust, Security and Immutability.

Blockchain technology, initially developed for cryptocurrencies like Bitcoin, has evolved to offer a wide range of applications across various industries. Here are some key use cases of blockchain technology:

Cryptocurrencies and Financial Services, Supply Chain Management, Healthcare, Voting Systems, Identity Management, Smart Contracts, Real Estate, Intellectual Property and Royalties, Government and Public Sector. So has blockchain has to be implemented in India to improve the economy.

Camaraderie

By S. Suriya
3rd Year B.A. English

October 31st, 2017, was a day filled with a mix of emotions as we were just 11 days away from celebrating my grandpa's 77th birthday. It was a Tuesday, and Chennai was drenched in heavy rain, leading schools to announce a holiday for the day. My parents, suffering from a virus fever, decided to take the day off work. This allowed my brother and me the opportunity to visit our aunt's house, where my grandpa was also staying.

After a warm breakfast, my grandpa settled down for a rest, and my cousins, friends, and I took the chance to enjoy a game of cricket in the spacious hall. The sound of our laughter and the thwack of the bat against the ball filled the room as we immersed ourselves in the game, oblivious to the gloomy weather outside. As the clock ticked toward lunch, my aunt went to wake grandpa from his slumber. However, when she gently shook him, he did not stir.

In a moment of rising panic, she called out loudly, drawing our attention. We rushed into the room, only to find my grandpa's face glistening with tears, which sent a wave of distress through me. I felt the chilling reality that his body was cold and grew heavier with every breath that he failed to take. It was as if time had suddenly slowed down, and I became utterly disoriented.

In that agonizing minute, countless memories replayed in my mind as I recalled the many moments we had shared. I remembered the afternoons spent together watching historical serials on TV, such as Mahabharat and Ramayan. I also thought about the exhilarating cricket matches we followed, particularly the nail-biting moments of the 2011 World Cup final. It was during that match that I witnessed my grandpa cry for the first time—a stark contrast to his usual stoic demeanor, which he had maintained even after my grandma's passing. He often shared his excitement about the 1983 World Cup, describing how he had listened to the radio commentary and how it had ignited a passion in him like never before. It was then that he confessed it was the first time he had ever shed tears over a sporting event.

Memories of our playful chess matches, sometimes numbering thirty games a day, filled my thoughts. He would often let me win, just to see the joy on my face. I recalled the day he gifted me my first cricket bat when I was in third grade. The two of us enjoyed countless afternoons playing together in the park, fostering a bond that was incredibly special to me.

As his walking partner, I accompanied him daily on his morning walks, which lasted about 10 kilometers. He was determined to stay healthy despite his diabetes, and I cherished these moments spent together. He would often treat me to small packs of stationery or delicious snacks and share captivating stories from his own life, rich with wisdom and humor. The daily 10 rupees he gave me felt like a treasure, contributing to my happiness in profound ways.

All of these moments rushed through my mind in just a single minute, overwhelming me with emotion, and I sobbed uncontrollably that day. As I reflect on it, even now in 2017, I find myself not seeking self-improvement through books; instead, the truest and most valuable book I hold dear is the story of my grandfather—a collection of memories that continue to shape my life.

Dreams beyond boundaries

Birds wish to run, yet they're bound to the sky Animals long to soar, but on ground, they rely Trees dream of swaying in the breeze
But rooted deep, they stand with ease

Fishy earn to roam on solid ground
Yet in water's depths, they're tightly bound
The airy earns to be seen by the eyes
Yet remain sun seen, despite its cries

The water longs to fade, unseen, but its transparency remains
Humans can run, can soar, in skies up high Move on land, beneath the open sky
Seen by all, yet hidden from the eye

Humans stride, their talents vast and wide,
Yet every creature longs, their dreams beside.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

The seamless fow of whimsical rhythms and words,

Like puzzles perfectly pieced together,

Like symphonise meticulously composed.

How do they breathe life into the abstracts?

Do they leave a fragment of their soul with every word written?

Do they not have to wrestle with each phrases,

Forcing meaning from silence,

Cutting and stitching every thoughts

Until they make sense.

Does it come to them naturally,

PAWN TO KING

Eighteen-year-old Gukesh Dommaraju became the youngest chess world champion in history. On December 12, 2024, I witnessed this iconic match between Gukesh and Ding Liren. The game appeared headed for a draw, but suddenly, Ding made a blunder that changed everything and paved the way for Gukesh to make history. This match reminds me of my grandfather, who introduced me to the world of chess.

My grandfather is a strict old man, always meticulous and hungry to win. He taught me many things in my childhood, but chess is the bond that connects us most deeply. In our family, everyone plays chess: my father, my uncle, my cousins, and my brothers. During the summer holidays, when the whole family gathers at our house, a “cold war” of chess unfolds, which is fascinating to watch. My father is an exceptional player who often frustrates my grandfather during their matches; he dominates everyone in the house.

My father consistently wins the family tournaments, and sometimes we all team up against him, like 10 against 1, yet he still manages to draw the game. My ultimate goal was to defeat my father in chess. However, as time went on, fewer and fewer family members visited, and my grandfather's enthusiasm waned, leading him to feel tired and depressed.

To cheer him up, he started teaching me the art of chess and its tricks. I first played with him in 2011, and it quickly became a routine. In the beginning, he often lost matches to encourage my enthusiasm for the game, and I didn’t realize right away that he was playing differently with me compared to how he played against my father and others. While playing with them, his face would turn red with stress, and my grandmother would often caution my father to move away, knowing my grandfather didn’t want to lose.

When I was nine years old, in 2013, I asked my grandpa why he was losing to me. He responded, "You are just a small boy, like a pawn, and it will take time for you to wage war against me. You are like a pawn, and I am the king," he said with a smile. That hurt a lot, and I felt upset knowing the truth; I didn't want to be a pawn anymore. So, I practiced with my father during his free time to improve my skills, but every time we played, my father would dominate me. He showed no courtesy; a true loss is far greater than a fake win.

This incident led me to play with my grandfather less often, which contributed to his depression. Even though he had distractions like watching cricket, television shows, and movies, chess remained his favorite pastime. I only played with him when I learned a new trick and wanted to test it out. Before this incident, I competed in about 30 games each day, but that gradually decreased to 20, then 15, 10, 5, and finally just 2 games a day.

After months of intense practice—which turned into a couple of years—the day finally arrived on August 11, 2016, when I challenged my grandfather to an honest match. He accepted, and we played the first game. Two years prior, I had lost to him in just 4 minutes, but this time, I lasted 10 minutes. Even though I lost the first match, I could feel the momentum building. I asked for another game, and this one was tightly contested. I noticed my grandfather’s face turning red and showing signs of stress; I felt confident that 50 per cent of my victory was assured.

After 30 minutes of hard-fought play, I finally won the match. My grandfather was stunned and couldn't believe what had just happened. I felt like I was soaring above the clouds at that moment, and he congratulated me with 500 rupees. That was the moment I finally became a king.
